1. Certain selected pro-Cominform Slav Communists have been traveling for some time from Argentina to Albania, at times via Italy, for the purpose of participating in a projected coup d'etat against Tito.

2. The last known transfer of individuals took place on an Argentine ship, on which fourteen men traveled surreptitiously and disembarked in an Albanian port. Prior to sailing, the stowaways were concentrated in the Buenos Aires Boca district, the rowdy waterfront section where numerous Slavs live. Although the ship has not yet been identified, it is known that it traveled in Yugoslav waters before returning to Buenos Aires and was met at the port of Spalato by mounted machine guns. The crew was not allowed shore leave, but when someone occasionally did go ashore, he was carefully watched by police authorities.
